Introduction

Brady is a fairly common Irish surname and I have made no attempt to trace all Irish Bradys. This document is focussed on the descendants of my Brady ancestor who served in the British Army in the 1800s & took his discharge in New Zealand in 1849, and is intended to provide a general overview of the many descendant branches of our Brady family tree. There will be more information on my immediate family, and their story, as that is what I am most familiar with, but I hope that it will also provide a better understanding of the other descendant lines, and how we are all related.

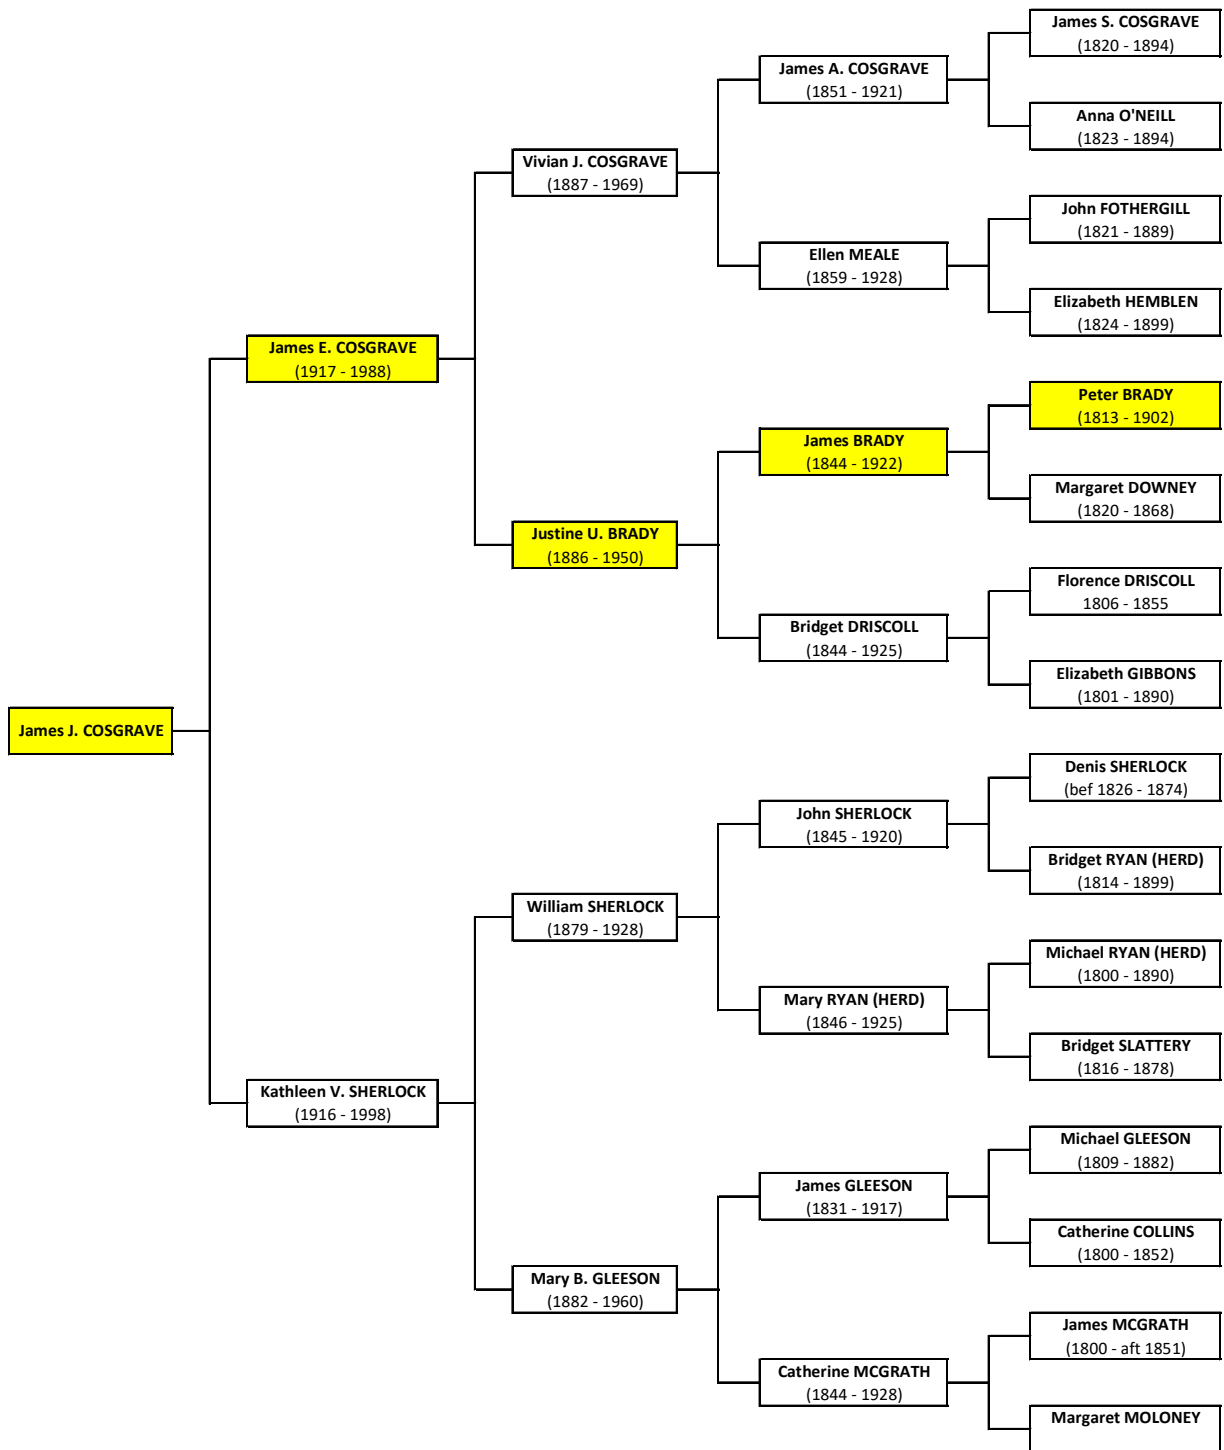

Throughout the document, to protect their privacy, I have tried to avoid providing details of living relatives, and I apologise if this cut-off has not been perfectly executed.

This is not intended to be the final word on the Brady family of Panmure and Howick (today suburbs of Auckland), New Zealand, and I hope that over time, new information will be identified, and that people from the various descendant branches might add additional chapters to this document, expanding the story of their Brady lines.

The research that went into this document is not entirely my own work, and I acknowledge the tireless efforts of Fr. Kevin O'Donoghue (1926-2017) and Keith Sellar (1929-2020) for their very large contribution in trying to get it all correct. More recently I have been touch with members of a Facebook group for "William and Hirata Brady Whanau", who have amassed a lot of information on this branch of the Brady family, some of which has been included in this document.

I apologise for any errors that may have crept into the document, and I welcome any corrections, family photographs, or other feedback, which can be incorporated into future revisions.

The chart on the next page shows with yellow highlight, the ancestral line that is the primary focus of this document.

Chapter 1 – Peter Brady and Margaret Downey

Researching my Brady ancestral line became quite challenging when I reached Peter Brady, my great great grandfather. This was because there were two Peter Bradys who both lived in Howick (Auckland, New Zealand) in the 1800s, both served in the British Army and both were married to women named Margaret. The other Peter Brady will be covered in chapter 2, just for completeness, but this chapter will focus on the Peter Brady who served in the 58th Regiment of Foot and who married Margaret Downey.

Peter Brady was born in the parish of Urney, County Cavan, Ireland circa 1816ⁱⁱ, a son of a tailor, also named Peter Brady. Peter, a labourer, enlisted in the 58th Regiment on 13 October 1836 and was assigned regimental number 881. He likely began his military career at Fermoy Barracks in County Cork, but by 1841 he was part of the garrison manning Edinburgh Castle.

Peter Brady in 1841 Census of Scotland

Around this time, Peter Brady married Margaret Downey, but despite an extensive search of available records in Ireland, Scotland and England, I have not found a record of their marriage.

In November 1841 the regiment was ordered to Chatham in Kent, England in readiness for travel to Australia, where they would provide garrison duties at Sydney. Soldiers from the 58th Regiment acted as guards on several convict ships sailing to Australia over the following few years. Peter Brady, with his wife Margaret, sailed with the 58th Regiment to Australia on the ship Pestonjee Bomanjee, leaving Gravesend on 17 May 1844 and arriving in Sydney on 30 September after stops at Rio de Janeiro and Hobart.

Six babies were born on the journey from Gravesend to Hobart, including James Brady, the first child of Peter Brady and Margaret Downey, who was born on 30 August, 11 days before the ship arrived at Hobart. James Brady was baptized at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church at Paramatta, New South Wales on 13 October 1844, and the baptism record states that he was a child of Peter Brady and Margaret Downey, who were living at the 58th Regiment barracks in Paramatta.

When Maori unrest surfaced in 1845, the 58th Regiment was sent to New Zealand, at the request of Governor George Grey, to maintain order, and Peter and Margaret Brady sailed on the ship British Sovereign, arriving in Auckland on 2 June 1845.

The unit did not stay in New Zealand very long and was back in Sydney in December 1846. Peter and Margaret's second child, a daughter named Anne, was born 20 November 1846 (also at sea?), and she too was baptized at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church at Paramatta, New South Wales, on 18 February 1847.

In mid-1847 Peter Brady's unit was again sent to New Zealand, this time to Russell, where his second son, Phillip, was born on 23 April 1849. Peter served the remainder of his thirteen year term in the army in New Zealand, and he was discharged at Auckland on 30 September 1849, around the time that his regiment returned to Australia.

The family then settled at Panmure, where Peter opened a general store in 1851, obtained a liquor licence in 1854 and a slaughter house licence in 1858. In the 1859-1860 Jury List, Peter is listed as a publican. Peter and Margaret Brady baptized four children at Panmure, and the parish register entries identify the parents as Peter Brady and Margaret Downey, as follows –

- William James Brady, baptized 5 November, 1850
- Peter Brady, baptized 6 February, 1853
- Catherine Brady, baptized 1 January 1857
- Andrew Brady, baptized 28 August 1859

In the early 1860s the family moved to Howick, where Peter operated the Howick Arms hotel from 1863 to 1875. The Assessment Rolls for Howick show that Peter Brady owned five allotments in 1866 and eight acres in 1868. They baptized a further three children in Howick as follows –

- Joseph Brady, baptized 19 January 1862
- Henry Brady, baptized 7 January 1864
- Alfred Brady, baptized 29 October 1865

In addition to these ten documented children of Peter and Margaret Brady, family members believe that they had an additional child, Edward, born circa 1851. I have not found a civil birth record nor a baptism record for Edward Brady, which is unexpected, given that we have found baptism or civil birth records for his ten siblings. I have found a few pieces of information on the death of Edward Brady, identified by family to have operated the Tourist Hotel in Atiamuri from 1886 with his brother Alfred – he is buried in the same plot as a brother and sister in Howick; and his newspaper death notice identifies him as an uncle of Mrs. J.B. Cox (daughter of his sister Catherine Brady). So there is some evidence that Peter and Margaret Brady had a son named Edward.

James Brady, the eldest child of Peter and Margaret, will be covered in detail in Chapter 3.

Anne Brady died in Panmure on 7 January 1860 at the age of 13 years, and is buried in the Panmure Cemetery.

Phillip Brady, known as “the Howick Giant”, was found drowned in the Mangapai River, near Whangarei, on 17 November 1894ⁱⁱⁱ at the age of 45 years. An inquest was held and the verdict returned by the jury was “Found drowned, and there is no evidence before the jury as to how the deceased got into the water.”

William James Brady married Ngatau Te Hirata Keremeta and had a large family, which will be covered in chapter 4.

Peter Brady married Isabella McPherson and will be covered in chapter 5.

Catherine Brady died on 20 July 1927 and is buried in the Howick Cemetery. Her known descendants are as follows –

1. Catherine BRADY (b.4 Dec 1856-Panmure, Auckland, New Zealand; d.20 Jul 1927-New Zealand)

pt.: William KERR (d. Aft 1910)

2. Catherine KERR (b.7 Apr 1875-Howick, New Zealand; d.12 Aug 1949-New Zealand)

sp: James Benjamin COX (b.12 May 1875-Avondale, Auckland, New Zealand; m.25 Jan 1911; d.6 Jan 1953-New Zealand)

Andrew Brady married Margaret Hennessey and will be covered in chapter 6.

Joseph Brady married Maria Celia Crane and will be covered in chapter 7.

Henry Brady was born on 27 October 1863 and baptized at Howick a few months later. He died at Auckland on 5 September 1934 and is buried in the Howick Roman Catholic Cemetery.

Alfred Brady married Tauwehe Haunui / Taro and will be covered in chapter 8.

Margaret Brady, nee Downey, died at the Howick Arms on 26 April 1868. Her true age is unclear as the death notice in the Daily Southern Cross newspaper^{iv} stated “DEATH - On April 26, at her residence, the Howick Arms, Howick, Mrs. P. Brady, aged 42 years”. However her civil death registration states that her age was about 60 years.

Peter Brady died 15 November 1902. His obituary^v in the Auckland Star newspaper provides the following summary of his life – “Yet another of our old veterans has passed away at the age of ninety years, come December, viz., Mr Peter Brady, of Howick, late of the 58th Regiment. The remains of the old soldier were laid in the grave in the Panmure cemetery yesterday beside his wife, the Rev. Father Hara officiating, a large cortege from Howick following- Captain Hattaway, who was present at the funeral, related that he had known Mr. Brady since 1842, that he had fought in the first war of New Zealand, through every engagement, Okaihau, Ohaeawai, Ruapekapeka, and all the fighting of Heke's war; that he and others who remained in this colony had come thirty and forty miles from the bush country to bid farewell to the old corps, paraded at Albert barracks, where many of them kissed the colours under which they had fought and bled, and many other very interesting incidents. Mr. Brady was servant to Sir George Grey in the early days, and accompanied Sir George all through the North Island on that memorable journey when the first Europeans were allowed to visit the terraces in the Rotomahana Lake country, and the names of the party were etched in the centre of the terrace. Mr Brady had numerous children and grandchildren, and it was pleasant to see the devoted attention they showed him in his declining years”.

Chapter 2 – The Other Peter Brady

Peter Brady was born in Ireland about 1805, and enlisted with the 30th Regiment of Foot at Dublin on 30 December 1823. In 1829 he transferred to the 31st Regiment of Foot, and spent 22 years serving his country, mainly in the East Indies. He was discharged on pension at Chatham, England, on 13 June 1845.

After some unrest between local Maori and European settlers in New Zealand in 1845-46, the British government formed the Royal New Zealand Fencible Corps to provide security to the settlers. Recruits had to be under 48 years of age, be medically fit, and have served at least 15 years in the British Army. Each was to receive free passage to New Zealand for their family, a cottage on an acre of land, and an increased pension, in return for limited military service as required.

Peter Brady signed up, and he sailed to New Zealand on the ship Minerva^{vi}, arriving at Howick on 8 October 1847. The Fencible records at Howick Pioneer Village state that he travelled with a wife and one child. A (non-original) passenger list published as part of the New Zealand GenWeb project, does not name his wife, but identifies that she was born in England. It also states that the child was Anne, born in PRST, England, about 1847, suggesting that she was born not long before their departure for New Zealand. I am not convinced that the information regarding the child Anne is correct, as it is likely a misassociation of the Anne Brady who died at Panmure on 7 January 1860, aged 13 years (therefore born circa 1847), who was a daughter of Peter Brady and Margaret Downey, and was discussed in the previous chapter.

He is likely the Peter Brady who married a widow, named Margaret McEwan, on 12 March 1849. Margaret died of consumption on 28 January 1858 at Howick. Peter Brady, a butcher residing in Howick was the informant on his wife's death certificate, and he signed with an X (his mark), suggesting that he was illiterate.

There is no record of this Peter Brady having any children born in New Zealand, either before or after his marriage to Margaret McEwan.

Peter Brady died 19 June 1870 and the local newspaper^{vii} reported that "A man named Peter Brady died somewhat suddenly in Chancery-street on Sunday morning last. As the deceased however, had been ailing on and off for some little time past, an inquest will not be held on the remains".

Chapter 3 – James Brady and Bridget Driscoll

James Brady, the eldest child of Peter Brady of the 58th Regiment and his wife Margaret Downey, was born at sea between Rio de Janeiro, Brazil and Hobart, Australia on 30 August 1844, on board the ship Pestonjee Bomanjee, which was transporting Peter's unit to Australia. Upon arrival in Australia James was baptized at St. Patricks Church in Paramatta, New South Wales on 13 October 1844.

As a young child he moved with the regiment, as his father's service dictated, but from mid-1847 he was settled in Auckland, New Zealand, where he remained for the rest of his life.

On 20 January 1866, at 21 years of age, he married Bridget Driscoll, daughter of a Fencible settler, Florence Driscoll. The couple settled in Howick, where they produced a family of eleven children, as follows –

Chapter 4 – William James Brady and Ngatau Te Hirata Keremeta

William James Brady joined the Armed Constabulary on 11 August 1870 and was transferred to Taupo 4 days later. He remained in Taupo until his discharge on 31 March 1878. It was here that he met Ngatau Te Hirata Keremeta, a full blooded Maori of Te Arawa (Ngatai Huarere and Ngatai Wahiao), Ngatai Tuwharetoa and Ngai te Rangi. The couple married at Taupo circa 1871, but as Maori marriages were not required to be registered prior to 1911, no marriage registration record has been found.

After his discharge from the constabulary in 1878, William worked in Taupo as a blacksmith and in the late 1880s moved his family to Te Puke, where he continued blacksmithing. Circa 1905 William and family moved to Papamoa, where he farmed and raised thoroughbred horses.

William James Brady died at Papamoa on 9 July 1919, at 68 years old and his obituary^{viii} reads as follows – “It is our sad duty to chronicle the death of Mr. William Brady, which occurred suddenly at his residence, Papamoa, on Wednesday night. Deceased has resided in the Te Puke and Papamoa districts for over thirty years. For a long period he conducted a blacksmithing and coach building business at Te Puke, and then moved to Papamoa, where he engaged in farming up till the time of his death. He was born at Otahuhu, and in early life took a keen interest in racing matters. He was a prominent amateur rider, and rode numerous winners on racecourses all over the North Island. He also owned and trained many notable racehorses, including Garbinier (a great performer), Zulu, Steeltrap, Te Whetamaramara, Saunterer, Satellite, Papamoa, Princess of Thule, Mitiora and many others. He also rode in a match at Tauranga many years ago, the winning horse being owned by Mr J Ellis. After moving to Te Puke deceased took a keen interest in the breeding of thoroughbreds, and brought to the district such well-known sires as Vortex, Utepapa, Lord of the Isles, Purepo, and Formative; also, a number of high class mares. It may safely be asserted that he did more than any other man in the Bay of Plenty to improve the breed of light horses on the coast. Genial and warm hearted, on scores of occasions he went out of his way to do a good turn for a neighbour or a friend. One instance, typical of his consideration for others, is worth recording. A neighbour at Te Puke met with a serious accident, necessitating urgent medical attention, and deceased left his own business and drove the injured man to and from Tauranga over a road that was almost impassable and not to be compared with the road as we know it today. The late Mr Brady claimed a legion of friends, who will learn of his death with deep regret. He leaves to mourn their loss a widow and adult family, to whom the greatest sympathy will be extended in their bereavement. The funeral took place at Te Puke today and was largely attended”.

After the death of her husband, Ngatau went to Onehunga, to live with her daughter, Kathleen Langdon, where she died on 9 November 1942, aged 96 years. Her newspaper obituary^{ix} reads as follows – “At the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. Langdon, of Onehunga, the death has occurred of Mrs. Ngatau Te Hirata Brady, a chieftainess of the Arawa tribe, in her 97th year. Mrs. Brady, who was born at Taupo, was a daughter of the Arawa chief Mita Taupopokai, who died recently at Rotorua. She was married to Mr. William Brady, a member of the Armed Constabulary at Taupo during the Maori Wars. Her husband died in 1919, since when she had lived with her daughter at Onehunga. Of Mrs. Brady's family of 19, only two sons and five daughters survive her. There are numerous grandchildren and great grandchildren".

In August 2022, descendants of Ngatau erected a new headstone on her grave, to ensure that she will long be remembered.

As stated in Ngatau's obituary, the couple had 19 children, but none of the births were registered at the time of birth, as Maori birth registration was not required prior to 1913. The birth of their son, Henare, was registered in 1960.

The known descendants of William and Ngatau Te Hirata Brady are as follows –

Chapter 10 – Margaret Brady and Cornelius O’Donoghue

Margaret Brady was born 18 September 1868 at Howick, the second child of James Brady and Bridget Driscoll.

On 21 January 1895 she married Cornelius O’Donoghue, a native of County Waterford, Ireland, at Napier, New Zealand. Their marriage produced only one child, Dominic Henry Fitzroy, O’Donoghue.

Cornelius died at Hastings on 2 January 1912 and Margaret died at Te Awamutu on 6 June 1961.

Kevin O’Donoghue
(1926-2017).

Their grandson, Kevin O’Donoghue (1926-2017) recounted that he vividly remembered 3 February 1931, his first day of school, as it was also the day of the Napier earthquake. His Aunt Justine and Uncle Vivian Cosgrave came and picked him up soon after the earthquake and he spent several months living with them in Hunterville, and he attended school there. Kevin’s mother had died in August the previous year, and it is not known where his two younger siblings lived in the immediate aftermath of the earthquake.

Kevin trained at the Greenmeadows Seminary and was ordained as a Catholic priest in the Marist Order, on 17 December 1950.

There were two priests in the Marist Order named Kevin O’Donoghue. To differentiate between them, each had a nickname. Because of his love of music, this Kevin O’Donoghue was known as “Mozart” and because of his love of photography, the other was known as “Kodak”.

Chapter 12 – Justine Ursula Brady and Vivian John Cosgrave

Justine Ursula Brady was born at Howick, on 16 July 1886, the ninth child of James Brady and Bridget Driscoll.

On 10 November 1915 she married Vivian John Cosgrave, a police constable, in the Roman Catholic church at Howick, Auckland, and the couple settled into life together in Wellington, living at 228 Tinakori Road, and it was here that all five of their children were born.

Vivian's first promotion in the police force was to a sole-charge constable position in Levin in the mid-1920s, but by 1930 he had been transferred to Hunterville. The Truth newspaper of 3 April 1930 reports that "VIVIAN JOHN COSGRAVE is the law in Hunterville and he does his job well. While he would always prefer to do a man a good turn he does not allow his kindly nature to interfere in the discharge of his duties. As clerk of the court he wields his pen and conducts his cases well, while his guiding hand controls a wide district. "Cossy" loves football and he may often be heard instructing the young men in the rudiments of the game. He knows its "laws" and the boys listen well"^x.

From Hunterville, the family moved back to Wellington in 1935, living again on Tinakori Road, but this time at number 174, as Vivian was promoted to Police Sergeant. In 1939 he was transferred to Wanganui, in December 1940 to Taumaranui, and in 1944 to his final appointment, in Foxton.

Vivian retired in Foxton in 1955 after serving his 40 years with New Zealand Police. Justine had died on 2 May 1950 and is buried in the Foxton cemetery. In the mid-1960s Vivian moved to Wellington, where he lived with his daughter Noeline, until his death on 16 October 1969. He is buried in the Foxton cemetery, next to his wife and their two unmarried children.

George S. & James E. Cosgrave (Abt. 1922).

As mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, Vivian and Justine Cosgrave raised five children, four boys and one girl. Their eldest child was my father, James Edward Cosgrave, who was born in Wellington on 9 January 1917. His life will be covered in detail in chapter 14.

The second child of Vivian and Justine Cosgrave was George Steele Cosgrave, whose life will be covered in chapter 15.

Noeline Catherine Cosgrave was the third child and only daughter of Vivian and Justine Cosgrave. Noeline was born 31 December 1920 in Wellington. She was at secretarial college in Wanganui when her father was transferred to Taumaranui, and Noeline boarded with a local Wanganui family until her studies were completed. Noeline worked in an administrative role for the New Zealand government until retirement, and she then worked for a firm of architects.

Noeline did not marry and she cared for her father in his later years. When her property on Kemp Street, Kilbirnie became too much for her to look after, she moved into an apartment on William Street, where she lived until moving to a care home when her health failed. Noeline died at 95 years of age on 28 September 2015 and is buried with her parents in the Foxton Cemetery.

Vivian John junior (Vic or Viv) was born 20 January 1923. Viv (as I knew him) joined the Royal New Zealand Air Force (70987), and was a career officer. In the 1967 New Year's Honours he received an M.B.E. (Military Division). Viv retired from the Air Force as a Warrant Officer.

He married Audrey June Martyn in 1951 and they had two sons – Gary Martyn and Paul Edward. Both sons emigrated to Australia, and after Viv retired, he and Audrey also moved to Australia, settling in Brisbane.

Viv was hit by a car while crossing the road, and died 11 April 2007. Audrey died 22 January 2014. Both are buried in Nerang, Queensland.

The youngest child, Henry Timothy (Harry) Cosgrave was born 4 May 1924. After high school Harry joined the Royal New Zealand Air Force (71779) and spent a portion of his career stationed in Singapore.

Harry married Kathleen Marjorie Jury in 1947 and the marriage produced four children – Karyn Justine, Antony John, Peter Christopher and Michael David.

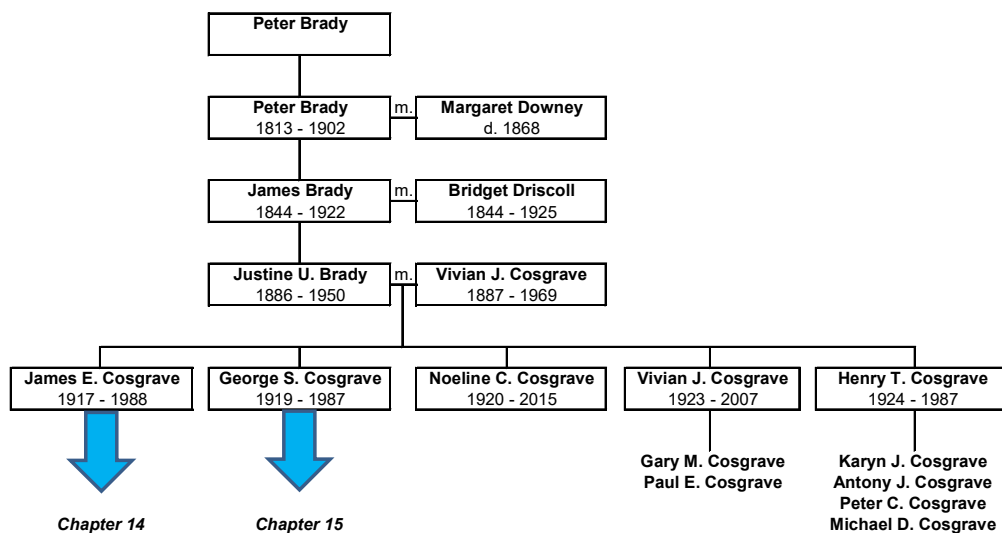

He retired to the Air Force Officers Reserve List as a Flight Lieutenant on 17 February 1969 and was officially retired four years later Harry then worked for the City of Porirua, and died in Rotorua on 25 April 1987. His wife, Kathleen, died 20 October 2010 in Wellington.

Chapter 13 – Veronica Brady

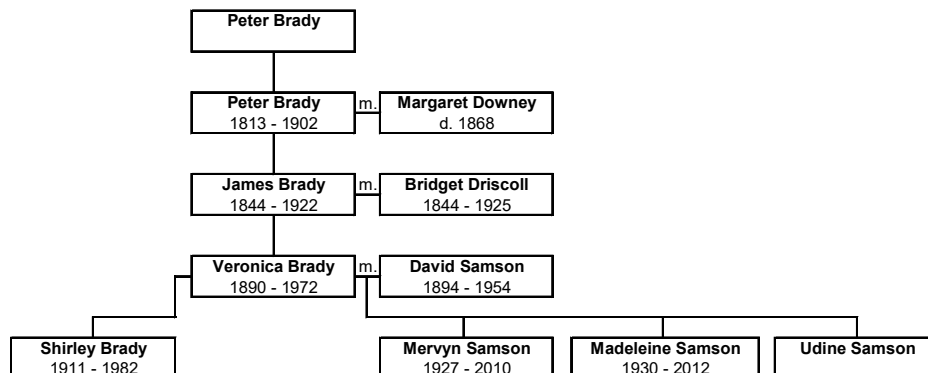

Veronica Brady, the eleventh and youngest child of James Brady and Bridget Driscoll, was born at Howick on 9 November 1890.

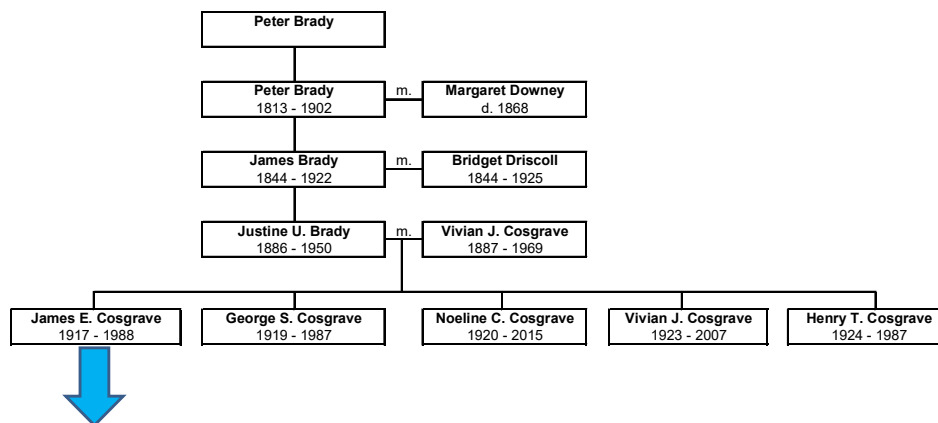

In 1911 she had a child whose birth was registered as Shirley Clarence Raymond Brady. In 1926 Veronica married David Nelson Samson, with whom she had three additional children.

David Samson died on 30 May 1954, and Veronica died in 1972. Veronica's known descendants are as follows -

Chapter 14 – James Edward Cosgrave and Kathleen V. Sherlock

New Zealand had been at war for a little over a year, when Justine Ursula Brady married Vivian John Cosgrave on November 10th 1915. Vivian's brothers, James and George, had signed up for military service and were already serving overseas, so they missed the celebration.

It was a difficult time for New Zealand, having suffered heavy losses in the Gallipoli campaign, so there would have been much joy, when just a few months later, Justine announced that she was pregnant with their first child, a son, who was born in Wellington on January 9th 1917. As their first son, in keeping with the Irish naming tradition, he was named James after his paternal grandfather (James Alexander Cosgrave), and Edward after Vivian's brother, George Edward Cosgrave, who was missing in action in France at that time.

Justine, James & Vivian
Cosgrave abt. 1920.

The family of three lived at 228 Tinakori Road, and were soon joined by three more sons and a daughter – George Steele Cosgrave (1919); Noeline Catherine Cosgrave (1920); Vivian John Cosgrave (1923); and Henry Timothy Cosgrave (1924).

In November 1926, Vivian was transferred to Levin, but only 2 years later in January 1929, he was transferred to Hunterville, a sole-charge posting for a senior constable, and the family lived at the police house on Milne Street (State highway 1) in Hunterville.

Nothing is known of James's early education, but he likely attended the local Hunterville school. In 1932, when he was 15 years old, his parents decided to give him the opportunity to attend a better high school than was available in the Hunterville area, and enrolled him as a boarder at St. Patrick's College, Silverstream, in the Hutt Valley. At Silverstream James played rugby in the 7th and 8th fifteen, so was definitely not a star sportsman. But he did excel at rifle shooting, being considered a first class shot, with a score of 87, just 3 points short of the marksman rating.

His academic prowess may not have been as great as his shooting ability, as he remembered being caned (corporal punishment with a bamboo cane) for getting his homework wrong. It is likely that it was at Silverstream that James also developed his lifelong interest in radio and electronics.

James did not stay at Silverstream beyond one year, opting instead to leave high school and return home to Hunterville, where he worked for a local baker. Here he developed an ability to make excellent scones and other baked goods, learning to adjust the mixture based on the “feel” of the dough. His scone making prowess was much appreciated by his family in later years.

In March 1935, Vivian Cosgrave was promoted to the rank of Police Sergeant, and the family returned to Wellington. James moved back to Wellington with the family and in August 1936 he joined New Zealand Railways as a Guard. Initially, Jim (as he was now known) worked on the Wellington suburban trains, and in June of 1937 he was responsible for organizing the sound system for the opening of the new Wellington Railway Station. He later worked on the main rail lines, being recorded as a Tablet Porter in 1938, in which role he worked on the Wairarapa line and the North Island Main Trunk line.

From Wellington, Jim was transferred to Tokomaru in early 1939, where he stayed at the Guy’s boarding house on Rata Street, Tokomaru. Violet Guy, the proprietor’s daughter, was something of a matchmaker and introduced Jim to Kathleen (Kath) Sherlock. He and Kath hit it off, but on 3 September 1939 New Zealand declared war on Germany and their lives changed significantly.

On 29 December 1939 Jim attested for the Royal New Zealand Air Force at Weraroa, Levin, and by late January 1940 he was in training as a Wireless Operator at Wigram Air Force Base, near Christchurch.

Jim requested permission from the Air Force, to marry Kath, and on 17 February 1940, that request was approved. Jim purchased an engagement ring, which was mailed to Kath on 14 April, and both families were informed of the planned wedding. In late July, with many of his mates being transferred overseas, Jim was transferred to Ohakea Air Force Base, near Bulls. Perhaps this was a compassionate move, given the planned wedding.

Jim Cosgrave & Kath Sherlock 1940 wedding.

Jim and Kath were married at St. Patrick’s Roman Catholic Church in Palmerston North on 3 September 1940. After the wedding, Kath remained living with her mother and sisters, who around this time had moved into Palmerston North and bought a house at 56 Roy Street, and Jim returned to the Air Force.

Jim continued to be stationed at Ohakea, apart from a short stint at Milson in 1942 (where he was promoted to Corporal), until he was transferred to Whenuapai, near Auckland in September 1943. After only a few days at Whenuapai, he was transferred to Waipapakauri and then on to Ardmore. While Jim was stationed at Ardmore, he was promoted to Sergeant, and Kath gave birth to their first child, Margaret Ann Cosgrave. Jim was not home for the birth, but did get leave soon after, to see his baby daughter.

On 26 October 1944 Jim was transferred to Lauthala (Laucala) Bay on the island of Viti Levu in Fiji. New Zealand had been given responsibility for air reconnaissance around Fiji, and this was to be done with flying boats. The base at Lauthala Bay was developed to house the Catalina and Sunderland flying boats which fulfilled this mandate. Jim told stories of the flying boats landing two-man teams at remote islands, to spend weeks at a time, observing the sea in the area, looking for enemy ships and submarines. The radio operator was crucial to this work, as radio was the only means of communications with base. He claimed that the crews lived primarily on whiskey and bananas, to augment the military rations provided.

Soon after V.E. Day (8 May 1945) Jim was hospitalised for a short period with Dengue Fever, from which he recovered well.

The war officially ended with the surrender of Japan on 15 August 1945, but No. 6 Flying Boat Squadron was to stay in Fiji until their work could be transitioned to the civil aviation authority. Flight Sergeant (391966) James Edward Cosgrave returned to New Zealand in December 1945, after an 8 ½ hour flight on a Catalina from Fiji. He was officially discharged from the Air Force on 8 February 1946, and was entitled to wear the 1939-45 Star, the Pacific Star, the Defence Medal, the War Medal, and the N.Z. War Service Medal.

18 Haydon Street (1946).

In 1946 Jim and Kath bought a house at 18 Haydon Street, Palmerston North, which remained their home until their deaths. The house was built largely with recycled materials as access to new building material was still restricted due to the war. In 1958-59, the wash-house (complete with wood-fired water heater) was removed and a small addition was made to the rear of the house. At that time, the recycled roofing iron was also replaced.

Jim and Kath Cosgrave had 4 children in total, as listed below, but the second born lived only a few hours –

- Margaret Ann Cosgrave
- Vivienne Mary Cosgrave, born 5 June 1947; died 6 June 1947
- Patricia Ursula Cosgrave
- James John Cosgrave (the author)

After the war Jim hoped to open a neighbourhood convenience store (a dairy in New Zealand parlance), but it seemed that the local co-operative society was granted all of the permissions to build, with individuals left out in the cold. At a public meeting on the topic, Jim stated that he would walk bare-footed over broken glass to Awapuni (the other side of town) and carry his groceries home in a sack before setting foot in a co-op store, a pledge that he stuck to throughout his life.

Jim worked at Coles, a music and electrical shop on The Square in P.N., until the mid-1950s when he set up his own business, Communications Services, in the rapidly expanding field of mobile radio communications. Jim did the technical work, and Kath handled the office side of the business.

Running his own business as a one-man show, Jim did not take long holidays, but managed the occasional long weekend trout fishing with friends and relatives. Jim was on good terms with Monsignor Cullen, who had a rustic cottage on the southern shores of Lake Taupo at Pukawa.

Monsignor Cullen's Cottage at Pukawa.

Family holidays were spent at Monsignor Cullen's cottage, and involved Jim driving the family to Pukawa on a Friday night, staying the weekend to ensure that all was working well (generator for electricity, water pump, etc.), do a little fly fishing in the evening, and then driving home for the work week. He would return the following weekend to pick the family up. At least once during the week, Kath would make the trek up the dirt track to the road (often with one of the younger children in tow), hitchhike into Tokaanu, buy essential groceries and hitchhike back to Pukawa.

The British company, Pye Telecommunications Ltd., had begun selling their radio-telephones (two-way radios in North American parlance) in New Zealand in 1951, and these products became popular for mobile communications by emergency services and other fleet operators that needed to be in instant touch with their field staff. Communication Services became a regional dealer of Pye Electronics in New Zealand, a relationship which endured until the business was wound up after Jim's death.

At that time, telephone, telegraph and radio communication systems in New Zealand were primarily provided by the Post Office and it was illegal to compete with the Post Office for telecommunications revenues. However, technology was moving forward faster than the Post Office's ability to deliver service, and organizations were permitted to provide radio communications facilities for their own use where no Post Office service existed.

Communication Services became a leader in providing these systems to regional Power Boards (electricity distributors), and Catchment Boards (water resource and control organizations), municipalities, vets, taxis, etc.

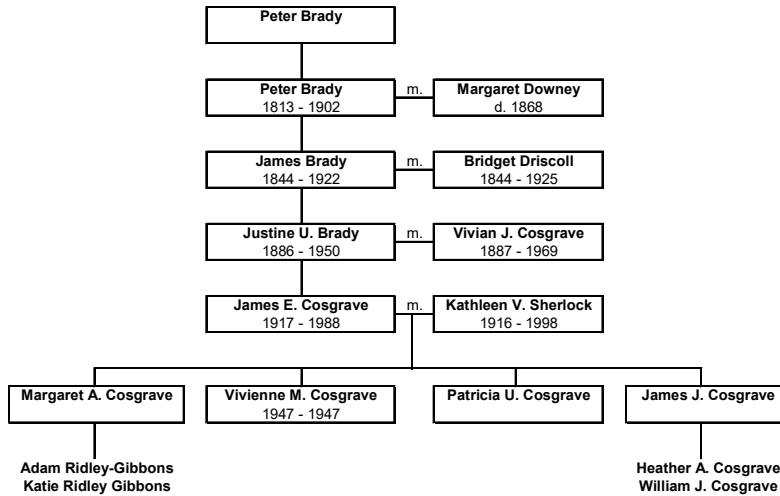

As mobile communication system use spread to trucking and other industries, the Post Office could not keep up with the demand for service, and they began licensing User Associations (groups of organizations that required radio services in a geographical area) to provide services for their members.

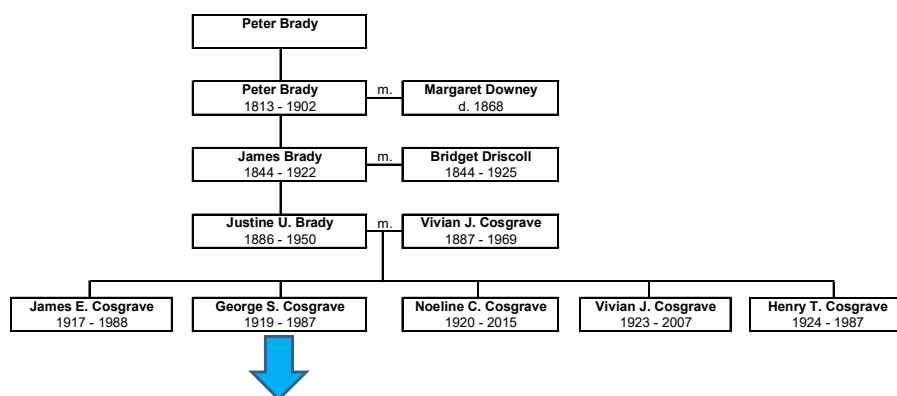

Communication Services new workshop (abt. 1960).

Communication Services was heavily involved in the engineering and maintenance of such systems throughout the Wairarapa and Hawkes Bay.

In the mid-1980s, Jim was diagnosed with leukemia, a diagnosis that was in common with several others involved with early radar systems during the war, suggesting that there may be a link between their wartime activities and their health. Around this same time, cellular mobile telephone service was introduced in New Zealand (1987), and this service rapidly overtook the traditional mobile communications services. Jim worked with mobile communications equipment from its war time beginnings, through its heyday, and the beginning of its decline, before passing away at the Palmerston North Public Hospital on 30 June 1988 at 71 years of age. Kathleen lived on for ten more years, and died peacefully at home on 23 April 1998 at the age of 82 years. Both are buried in the Kelvin Grove Cemetery in Palmerston North.

Chapter 15 – George Steele Cosgrave

The second child of Justine Brady and Vivian Cosgrave was George Steele Cosgrave, who was born 24 March 1919. He attended Hunterville School, Marton District High School (1933-1934) and St. Patrick's College, Wellington (1935-1936). After leaving high school, George joined the civil service, working in the Industries and Commerce Department.

The Second World War put his career on hold, as on 29 October 1940, at the age of 21, George joined the Royal New Zealand Air Force, as a Leading Aircraftman (Airman Pilot). He underwent basic training at Harewood, was remustered as an Air Observer in Levin, and at the end of February 1941 he sailed out of Auckland on the ship Awatea bound for Canada, where he underwent training as an Air Observer. The training was provided by the Royal Canadian Air Force as part of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

In Canada George was stationed in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan (Air Observer School), MacDonald, Manitoba (Bombing and Gunnery School), Rivers, Manitoba (Central Navigation School), Debert, Nova Scotia (31 O.T.U.). In September 1941 he was posted to the U.K., where he worked as an instructor for the following year and a half, apart from several short postings to operations units in India and Egypt. He was promoted to Flight Sergeant on 1 June 1942, gained a temporary commission as a Pilot Officer on 12 September 1942, and was promoted to Flying Officer in March 1943.

In a letter home in December 1943 George bemoaned the fact that without more operations time he could not be promoted above the rank of Flight Lieutenant, so was hoping for a posting to an operations unit.

In February 1944 George was posted to India for ten months, where he was attached to 355 Squadron, and was promoted to Flight Lieutenant in September 1944.

On 3 January 1945 George was repatriated to New Zealand, having spent 3 years and 310 days overseas. He then served with 40 Squadron, flying throughout the Pacific. On his return to New Zealand after a flight in April 1945 George was charged with breaching Air Force regulations for bringing in 3 ½ cartons of cigarettes. This was not against Customs regulations and he had declared the cigarettes and paid the duty, but it seems he was caught up in a report by Customs of goods secreted within the aircraft and would not normally have been charged as Customs did not enforce Air Force regulations. He received his one and only reprimand for this offense.

On 19 February 1946, Flight Lieutenant (403952) George Steele Cosgrave was discharged from active service to the Reserve A List. His commission was officially terminated on 1 June 1956. During his service, George had flown a total of 826 hours on Anson, Battle, Hudson, Wellington and Liberator aircraft.

For his wartime service, he earned the Burma Star, Defence Medal, African Star and Pacific Star.

After leaving the Air Force, George rejoined the Industries and Commerce Department of the New Zealand government on 1 April 1948, as a Clerk in Wellington. He was later posted to Melbourne and by 1950 he was the Assistant Trade Commissioner in Bombay, India. George remained in India, serving as acting Trade Commissioner for an extended period in 1952, before returning to New Zealand in early 1953.

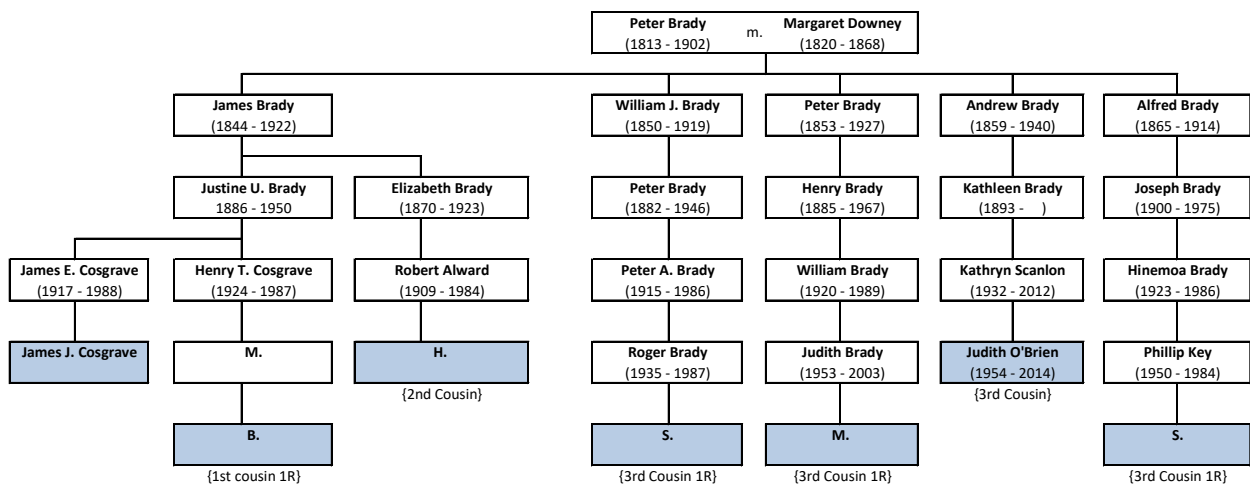

George became estranged from the rest of the family around 1957, and died in Auckland Hospital on 23 July 1987 at 68 years of age. He is buried in the family plot at the Foxton Cemetery, with his parents and sister Noeline.

Chapter 16 – DNA Testing

Autosomal DNA testing, through companies such as Ancestry, 23andMe, MyHeritage and FamilyTreeDNA, is of huge benefit to genealogists in confirming connections identified by researching the paper trail of our ancestors. If two people who have well-researched family trees, which identify a common ancestor, also share autosomal DNA, and if there is no other obvious ancestral connection, then it is highly likely that the identified common ancestor is correct.

Through comparison of my autosomal DNA results, with the results of others who have taken DNA tests, I have found Brady cousins who were previously unknown to me, back to the third cousin level. In total, I have identified more than 45 descendants of Peter Brady and Margaret Downey with whom I share DNA. So autosomal DNA testing has been instrumental in confirming my Brady ancestry.

Seven of the eleven children of Peter Brady and Margaret Downey produced children, and all but one of these produced children of their own. Of those six children of Peter and Margaret Brady I have confirmed DNA matches to all but one – Joseph Brady (1861-1898). The chart below shows Brady connections confirmed with autosomal DNA testing, from each of these five lines, but not all known DNA connections have been included in the chart to improve readability.

Brady DNA Connections of James J. Cosgrave.

There are many other people who have taken DNA tests, with whom I share significant amounts of autosomal DNA, and with whom I may share a common Brady ancestor, but there is no paper trail to establish the correct relationship.

For more distant connections, Y-DNA testing can also be very useful, in tracing the male ancestral line. The Y-chromosome is passed down the male line from father to son, largely unchanged, although mutations do occur from time to time. It is these mutations that create what is termed “genetic distance” between Y-DNA samples – the genetic distance between two samples increases by 1 with each mutation on either line of descent from a common ancestor. The relative stability of the Y-chromosome is therefore useful in identifying common male ancestors in ancient times.

I therefore encourage male Brady descendants to take the Big Y-700 test at FamilyTreeDNA, or even the somewhat cheaper Y-111 test, which could help to clarify how our Brady family fits into the overall haplotree of humankind. These tests are frequently on sale, especially around Black Friday in November.

To date I am not aware of any Brady male descendants of Peter Brady who have taken Y-DNA tests, so even one person testing would be useful, and several, from different lines of descent would be a bonus.
